

Cole Sayer

Frankenstein

October 24 - December 12, 2015

Opening Reception 10/24 7-9pm

David Petersen Gallery is pleased to present Frankenstein, an exhibition of new paintings and sculptures by Cole Sayer.

"It was on a dreary night that I beheld the accomplishment of my toils."

To which the affectionate Captain queried, "But what precisely was this accomplishment, Dr. Frankenstein? Merely a monster, or the product of the struggle with one's self?"

The Doctor sighed, "Perhaps, yes, in creating the monster nothing new was born, I just pulled myself apart. If only human bodies had hinges we could just splay and experience the many layers of consciousness in unison."

"I saw your wretched monster once, sitting against a tree in a park reading Goethe; that tragic story of love unrequited. Maybe we become the book we are reading, composed of the things we hold on to."

"After flipping through the pages the little waft of wind hits the face indefinitely. Suddenly everything becomes a mirror of itself. The swan is its image. The surface of the water is the swan. A couple running compresses, and everyone is melded to the meadow in a park. They are all that place of slow transformation. Forces are funny, vibrating invisibly all the time. We imagine we walk on the earth, but we don't."
